

time. A high wind forced him to descend, and not trouble with his motor, as at first reported.

All Manchester Awake.

Notwithstanding that it was announced early last evening that both aviators had alighted for the night, thousands in Manchester and London remained awake all night to hear the result. All of Manchester was out when Paulhan arrived there at 5:32 and the police had to form a cordon in order to get him to the automobile that took him to his hotel.

From first to last, White's flight was one of the bravest attempts in the history of aviation, to force his plane to top speed, in the hope of overtaking his competitor. In the wake of the Frenchman, he whirled in the darkness over the deep valleys and between the hills of the heart of England, outdistancing motor cars and trains, maneuvering against the wind, and stopping only when death was the alternative. At times his speed, like that of Paulhan's, was more than a mile a minute. Paulhan now bids fair to be acclaimed as the champion aviator of the world. He not only holds his new record, but that for the greatest altitude, having soared nearly 5,000 feet recently at Los Angeles, Cal. Paulhan recently made the long distance record which stood till he himself broke it today—30 miles. The best flight before was 33 miles, made by Henry Farman.

Contestants Congratulated.

Hundreds of messages were received this morning at the London headquarters of both Paulhan and White, congratulating them on their showing in the great race.

It was almost twelve hours to the minute from the time of Paulhan's departure that he swooped down on Manchester, to the wild cheering of an enthusiastic crowd.

The route to be followed was fairly well decided by natural conditions, and along its entire length, from early yesterday till the $50,000 prize had been won, interested crowds waited. In London excitement was no less intense than elsewhere.

Swarms of people besieged the newspaper offices and crowded about bulletin boards, and hundreds remained on the streets all night long, waiting for news of the resumption of the flight. At the theaters, the excitement of the contestants was announced to the audiences. In the big restaurants the news was posted. The cheering on the streets on the receipt of each bulletin, with almost American energy.

Rousing Reception Planned.

There was only one topic in England. Today the excitement is scarcely less than it was yesterday and last night. Thousands, kept from their beds all night by the race, made no attempt to retire today, but stayed up to give the aviators a rousing reception on their return to London.

In the camp of the Englishman there is gloom today. The rejoicing among the friends and followers of the Frenchman is correspondingly intense. But there is not the least suggestion of bitterness, in spite of the cleverness with which Paulhan got the better of White in the start. "Just French luck" is the way some of the followers of White describe the outcome.

One feature is the fact that the new type of plane which White used was defeated. Both entrants used Farman airplanes. White's was a biplane with monoplane tail; the Frenchman's was an ordinary Farman biplane.

Paulhan's Aeroplane Damaged.

MANCHESTER, England, April 28.—Cheered by 100,000 persons, Louis Paulhan, winner of the greatest air race in history, took a train for London today. At the station he was carried on the shoulders of the crowd's leaders.

On examination, it was found today that his aeroplane, which was taken apart for shipment in London, was badly battered in the 78-mile flight. The light framework was put to a severe test. Paulhan declared it was still good for further trips without serious repairs, however.

Many auto parties left here today to meet Graham White. The Englishman, though beaten, is as much of a popular hero as the French conqueror.

DOCUMENTS DENIED ATTORNEY BRANDEIS

Investigating Committee Refuses to Consider Charge of Ante-dating Opinion.

The Ballinger-Pinchot investigation committee today voted to suppress all documentary evidence which would disclose the truth or falsity of the charge that Attorney General Wickersham ante-dated his letter regarding the Glavis charges two months.

During the testimony last week it was developed that Attorney General Wickersham referred to subjects not mentioned in the charges Glavis filed with the President, but were made by public in the Glavis magazine articles more than two months after the opinion is dated.

Immediately following that testimony, Mr. Brandeis asked that the Attorney General produce not only all of the original papers, but also a list of those who had assisted him in preparing his opinion, the dates on which they began their employment, and the dates on which their employment ceased.

By means of such documentary evidence, Mr. Brandeis could have proved conclusively that the Attorney General's opinion was ante-dated, or on the other hand counsel for Secretary Ballinger could have proved that the opinion was written on the date indicated.

Brandeis Request Denied.

When the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee met today Chairman Nelson announced that the committee had voted to deny the request of Louis Brandeis, counsel for Glavis, calling upon Attorney General Wickersham for all original papers having a relation to his opinion given to the committee, and also the names of those who assisted him in the preparation of the opinion.

The committee was unanimous in denying the Brandeis request. Senators Nelson, Flint, Sutherland, and Root and Representatives McCall and Denby voted against the request. Senators Fletcher and Representatives James and Graham, Democrats, voted to call upon the Attorney General for the papers.

The significance of the demand made by Attorney Brandeis and its rejection by the committee is that it centers around the Attorney General's opinion of September 11. The prosecution has already clearly indicated that it intends to prove that this opinion was ante-dated, and that President Taft did not have it before him when he held Ballinger blameless and dismissed Glavis from the government service.

Wanted to Prove Theory.

Mr. Brandeis called for the originals of the Wickersham letters and opinions because he believed that they would prove his theory that the opinion was not rendered until some time in December instead of on September 11, the date which appears on the printed document.

Mr. Brandeis protested because he had not been given the privilege of appearing before the committee before it voted on his request.

"The matter has been disposed of," remarked Chairman Nelson, curtly. "It would be well to proceed with the examination." Mr. Brandeis thereupon announced that he would make additional requests in the hope of getting the papers. He regards these papers as of the utmost importance. Thus far there has been no denial of the inference that the Wickersham opinion was ante-dated.

Smith Called "Easy."

George Otis Smith, chief of the Geological Survey, resumed the witness stand today. Mr. Vertrees asked the witness if George Pinchot had been on one occasion that Secretary Ballinger was fooling him (Smith), and that Smith was easy.

Smith replied that Pinchot had made such a statement, and that he answered that so long as his recommendations were being followed he was not concerned about being fooled, and would even plead guilty to being easy.

Senator Root asked Mr. Vertrees how much more time he would require for the presentation of his direct testimony, and Mr. Vertrees replied that he hoped to finish it this week, and certainly would do so provided the cross-examination were not protracted.

Mr. Smith's testimony was devoted largely to technical matters and referred almost entirely to water power sites. He expressed, however, his personal opinion about Alaska coal lands and minimized the value of the Cunningham claims.

These claims, he said, constituted only one thirty-thousandth part of the total coal area in Alaska. He also suggested it would be well to allow all claimants who had made bona fide entries to get their claims to patent.

Representative Madison arrived at the committee room after the committee had voted on the Brandeis request. He had the clerk read the letter to him and after thinking the matter over for some time he had himself recorded as voting to have the Attorney General produce the papers asked for.

Enemy to Conservation.

In discussing the policy of conservation Mr. Smith said that the United States Government itself is the worst enemy of conservation, so far as it relates to coal. The Government, he said, buys the very cheapest coal for use at the lowest price, while the ordinary citizen is compelled to take what is left and pay a high price in order to strike an average to make up for the low Government cost.

Smith's testimony was wearying to all members of the committee except those who entered into a discussion with him of every conceivable subject from campaign publicity to coal that a Washington housewife burns in her kitchen range.

MEN IN GRAY MARCH 15,000 IN THE LINE

Parade of Confederate Veterans a Spectacular Climax to the Reunion.

MOBILE, Ala., April 28.—The greatest crowd that ever gathered within this quaint old city, estimated at more than 100,000 persons, witnessed today the spectacular climax of the United Confederate Veterans' reunion—the parade of the survivors of the army in gray.

There were fully 15,000 old warriors in line, and perhaps half as many sons of veterans and other bodies that went to make up the parade. The procession, enthusiastic as it was, was a grandstand, reviewing stands, windows, and every point of advantage were filled while the street were banked from the street rail tracks to the buildings. The cheering drowned out the strains of the bands.

General Gordon and members of General Evans' staff reviewed the parade. The crowd at Evans' headquarters was complete. The parade was completed at last night by the strenuous proceedings of yesterday, and the excitement attended by the veterans' convention, and was constantly attended by physicians during the night. The aged general left for his home in Atlanta today.

Are You in the Census?

If you have not been enumerated or if you have any doubt about it fill out this coupon and mail to the Census Editor, Washington Times:

To the best of my knowledge I have not been enumerated in this city or elsewhere.

Name

Address

In collecting the census of Washington the enumerators' regular routes are not due to be covered before Friday and in that case it is difficult to determine whether or not you and your family have been missed in the enumeration, until Friday. In the event you have been missed, when Friday arrives, or if you have the slightest doubt about it, fill out the above coupon and mail to the Census Editor of The Times.

TAKING OF CENSUS ABOUT COMPLETED

The work of taking the census of Washington will be practically completed by sundown tonight, although half a dozen enumerators will be employed for several days calling at places have been missed in the enumeration.

In this connection, The Times has been taking an active part in the census work. For several days it has been printing blank coupons for persons who have not been enumerated, to fill out, in order that Supervisor Broughton, district supervisor, may be notified of that fact. Numerous persons have already filled out these coupons and forwarded them to The Times office, and Mr. Broughton has been furnished with the names and addresses.

These names will not be published in The Times, the object being simply to aid in making the enumeration of the National Capital as nearly complete as possible.

Yesterday and today the force of clerks in the supervisor's office was busy sending out personal letters to persons temporarily located in other cities and who are known to be citizens of Washington.

asking them to fill out personal enumeration sheets in order that they may be enumerated as residents of this city. Some of these letters are being sent to cities in Europe, Asia, South America, and Canada. Many of them are being forwarded to Washingtonians in the Philippines, Cuba, and the Canal Zone. Mr. Broughton is of the opinion that more than 1,000 persons will be enumerated in this way.

At the close of their work today the several hundred men and women who have been taking the census here, will present a claim for the amount of money due them for their work. Some of these enumerators will be paid at the rate of 3 cents a name and others at the rate of 2 1/2 cents a name. The claims will be examined by Mr. Broughton and will then be presented to the disbursing officer of the census for payment.

Two enumerators, believing in modern methods, obtained an automobile yesterday and "released" up their territories in quick time.
